

EADV Spring Symposium 2023

Dear Distinguished Presidents of Dermato-Venereological National Society,
Dear Colleagues,

The EADV Spring Symposium returns, onsite this year to sunny Seville, Spain, where a 3-day programme accredited by UEMS-EACCME®, features clinically focussed updates and breaking news in the field of Dermatology and Venereology.

The specially curated programme offers you an intimate experience with over 90 top-class speakers across 25 sessions. For the first time, in a different format, the Symposium will be dedicating a full day of lectures to every topic so that participants benefit from an in-depth look at the practice-changing progress of these conditions and research developments with regards to prevention, early diagnosis and treatment.

The EADV Symposium will spotlight Psoriasis and Keratinocytic skin cancer, and in addition will be covering topics such as acne, pigmentary disorders, hair disorders, Hidradenitis Suppurativa, and atopic dermatitis.

David Moreno Ramirez, professor at the faculty of Medicine at the University of Sevilla, and president of the International Society of Teledermatology, will deliver the much-anticipated plenary lecture, Surgery of Advanced Melanoma.

EADV's leadership and organising committees look forward to welcoming you and your society's members to the Symposium in Sevilla. For this reason, we would be grateful for your support and endorsement in promoting the Spring Symposium amongst your members. This can be achieved through your website, networks and social media channels. A set of materials have been created for your use and is available here.

Whilst thanking you for your ongoing cooperation and support, we look forward to welcoming you in Seville.
